Band Boosters Keep The Momentum Going

Riding on the success of the first year of operation, the Trojan Explosion Booster Association has plans to increase its donor base and work closely with current and new partners. Excited by the involvement of parents of freshmen and transfer students, the boosters have strengthened the association by building a strong executive committee charged with reaching out to parents, alumni, faculty, staff and other supporters. The foundation of the hard work that lies ahead is now in place with the selection of Mr. Harold Allen, Finance Chair, Ms. Nellie Spann, Chair of Parent Involvement, Ms. Stephanie Smith, Partnership Chair and Ms. Yvonne Singleton, Programs Chair. The Trojan Explosion Booster Association is open to anyone interested in financially and morally supporting the marching band of Virginia State University. Contact us at VSUBandBooster@comcast.net and on the web at band.vsu.edu.

Planning Is Essential For A Successful Marching Season

Planning for a new marching season can be a daunting task. Even more daunting is the fact that Professor Holden is the only full time band staff member. The assistant directors, operations director and other coaches are all part-time staffers, which speaks volumes about the dedication and hard work they provide.

Advocating for a full time assistant director is one of our major goals.

Listed here are just a few of the tasks for which the Director of Bands and his staff are responsible.

- Hire needed personnel based on limited available funding
- Recruit new student musicians
- Audition scholarship applicants
- Inventory instruments and uniforms
- Plan band camp
- Contact students & parents explaining band camp instructions and fees
- Select instrument section leaders
- Reserve dormitory rooms for students attending band camp
- Provide information to food service regarding meals required during camp
- Hold tryouts for drum majors, dancers, flags, twirlers
- Plan at least three half time shows for the six home games – music & drills
- Arrange music for each instrument section & write original music
- Copy arranged music for each musician in each section
- Have band uniforms sized and altered
- Order marching shoes, gloves and practice and travel clothes
- Hold daily practice of music, marching and drills
- Stock water and Gatorade for hydration
- Budget for travel to away games- motor coaches, meals and hotel rooms
- Work with police and EMT for all travel
- Coordinate arrival and schedule for visiting bands
- Handle any student and staff issues
Band Camp days start with physical training before the sun gets up.

After physical training there are sectional practices, full band practice, marching in block formation & learning and practicing drills.
A special thank you to Dean Andrew Kanu for providing the much needed audio system. This equipment makes it much easier to communicate commands while on the practice field.

The band directors design the drills. Band members learn those drills and not even darkness stops practice.

The goal is perfection.

The band room carpet is marked with five-yard lines, allowing drill practice inside.
Work Hard, But Take Time For Fun

And Rest
If it’s Wednesday, it’s mandatory study session time for freshman band members in Johnson Memorial Library.

Students must be great on the field and great in the classroom!

Student Focus

Meet TaVaris Logan, a Provost Scholar in the Honors Program, a cymbal player in the Trojan Explosion Marching Band (he is also a tuba player) and a member of the VSU Gospel Chorale. He is a graduate of Central Senior High School of Lunenburg County and Southside Virginia Community College in Alberta, Virginia. While in high school, he participated in the VSU Dual Enrollment Program, allowing him to take college courses while in high school. He served as drum major of the Central High School Marching Chargers for four years and has been a musician for five churches.

TaVaris came to VSU with 60 transferred credit hours. In his first semester he is classified as a junior. A mechanical engineering major, with two Career Studies Certificates in High Performance Technology and Advance Manufacturing, he plans to pursue a career in mechanical engineering and eventually return to VSU as a professor in the College of Engineering and Technology.

Partnership Among Band, Band Boosters and Tamm Proves a Great Success

There is a special joy that comes when it is realized that everything needed for a special project is right at your doorstep. The Textile, Apparel and Merchandising Management concentration in the Family and Consumer Sciences curriculum (College of Agriculture) is a program about which more people need to be aware. The band boosters had an idea to turn retired band uniforms into pillows, tote bags or other fashion accessories. But where could a reputable company be found to do the job? In searching the Internet, there was one company, but it was in California, making shipping cost prohibitive. A YouTube video of a university design group repurposing their band’s uniforms sparked an idea. Why not ask if anyone in Consumer Science (Home Economics for you older folks) could help us. Booster President, Mrs. Barbara Steverson, contacted Dean Hairston, College of Agriculture for a conversation about the possibility of working together on such a project.

Within a few weeks, Mrs. Steverson and booster Partnership Chairperson, Ms. Stephanie Smith, met with the Tamm team to discuss the feasibility of teaming to recycle the 100 band uniforms. Dr. Dana Legette-Traylor, Coordinator of the Tamm Program, Dr. Alice Joyner, Associate Professor, Mr. Montoya Phipps, Laboratory Instructor, and Ms. Nikki Hicks, Lead Faculty, discussed the needs of the band boosters and the abilities of the Tamm team to meet those needs.

Quickly, plans were put in place for an instructor and five paid student interns to use summer school sessions to deconstruct retired band uniforms, design tote bags, develop patterns, cut pieces from patterns, serge bag pieces and begin to construct new designer tote bags from the old uniforms.

These uniforms were worn by the band the year the drum line performed at the White House for President Obama. The bags are one of a kind, limited edition (only 200 total), handcrafted and numbered items. Sales will be online only and the pre-ordering website will go live at the end of September.

Band and Band Boosters Use Social Media to Promote the Trojan Explosion’s Thirtieth Anniversary Campaign

For thirty years Mr. Harold J. Haughton, Sr. and Mr. James Holden, Jr. have been working together as leaders of the Virginia State University marching band. Coming to VSU in 1984 to grow a band with dwindling numbers, Mr. Haughton revived the band legacy of VSU and gave the band the name Trojan Explosion. Serving as his assistant director, Mr. James Holden also played a large part in the revitalization of the band. From 2003 to 2013, Mr. Holden continued as assistant director to Dr. Mark Phillips. In 2013 Mr. Holden was named Interim Director of Bands. He knew what it would take to grow the band, having been a part of the steady growth started thirty years before. This year we celebrate thirty years and honor the legacy of Mr. Haughton.

Coming to a home football game? Look for our donor envelopes at home football games at the band booster tent. Write and give your check to one of our band boosters or take a courtesy return envelope and mail us your donation. Be a part of our list of band alumni who are giving back to our alma mater.
Ms. Alana Stubblefield and several other football parents are sponsoring this trip. This group attended every football game last year and sponsored travel to away games as well. In addition to the information on the flyer, please note the following:

1. This is an adult "Party Bus". Snacks and refreshments will be provided; however, feel free to bring along a small cooler or any other snacks and special beverages you may wish to consume.
2. The bus will leave on time in order for us to arrive at Bowie and get tickets to the game. Plan to board the bus between 11:30 a.m. & 11:45 a.m.
3. Payment should be made to Alana Stubblefield, whose contact information is on the flyer. Call her if you have questions and to arrange to pay for your bus ticket.
4. This game will be Homecoming for Bowie State University, so tickets may be in the $25+ range. Each person is responsible for purchasing a game ticket upon arrival at Bowie State.
5. We typically donate to the bus driver in the amount of $3 - $5 each (just making you aware beforehand).
6. Come prepared to cheer on the football team and the band. Wear your orange and blue and be ready to PARTY!

Questions to VSUBandBooster@comcast.net
My time at VSU in part, provided me the credentials and life experiences to have the quality of life that I have. Even though I was not in the band, it has always been a highlight for me to witness the performances. I’m convinced that the band has a great impact in recruiting potential VSU students. I’ve also learned of some of its needs not being met by the University due to financial constraints. These are just a couple reasons I feel obligated to do what I do for my alma mater!

Harold Allen ‘75

The Virginia State University Band is my family. I transferred to VSC in 1973, at the age of 21, and it was apparent that I would not be marching in the band. As a music major I wanted to contribute, so I asked Director O’Neill Sanford, in lieu of marching, could I arrange music for the band. He said absolutely and took me under his wing as teacher, mentor and friend. He also appointed me his first student director of the band. Under his leadership & mentoring I learned to write music for marching band and wrote for the VSU band for about 15 years. It was in 1974, that I wrote the original funky tune "Funk Fare", specifically for the VSU band. "Funk Fare" is the theme song the band has played consistently for 40 years. I love the VSU marching band, one of the best experiences I have ever had and by far one of the university’s absolutely best recruiting tools.

Bill McGee

As a former twirler in the Marching 110, I remember the excitement of game day performances at home and when traveling to other universities. I also remember performing during halftime shows for the Baltimore Colts, the Pittsburg Steelers, the Philadelphia Eagles and the Washington Redskins. Those were the days! I do what I do for VSU and the Trojan Explosion because I want our current students to experience the pride and excitement I felt years ago when the drum major's whistle blew and the drum cadence signaled show time. Come on Marching 110 alumni, join us in our support of the VSU Trojan Explosion with your donation.

Barbara Steverson ‘66

I support the VSU Trojan Explosion foremost because my daughter is a member of the band on the drum line. I want her to see my efforts so she will learn to give back to the program. I personally wanted to attend an HBCU but financially my parents could not afford to send me to college. So I can see the importance of supporting young adults in aiding them with scholarships to help them reach their dreams and goals.

Nellie McIver Spann
I have always enjoyed the band while attending VSC (I am a product of the 70s). Many of my dear friends were band members, twirlers and majorettes. I was so proud of them as they displayed their gifts and talents. The band is a vibrant representation of our beloved VSU. As the tradition continues, we must support our Trojan Explosion Marching Band, alumni, so we can continue to see them “take the field”!

Yvonne D. Singleton ‘77

I have wonderful memories of my years at Virginia State College (now University). I have great pride in my University and am convinced there is none better. I made life-long friends at VSU and the lessons learned there benefit me daily.

As a student, I was a fan of The Marching 110 and took great pride in their nationally televised appearances at professional football games in the late 1960’s. I had no idea of the amount of time and money it takes to field a marching band, until my nephew played in one a few years ago. The band is the Best Ambassador of VSU to the larger community. Even those who do not enjoy sports enjoy a great marching band. A marching band draws attention. It enlivens all occasions. The Trojan Explosion shines musically and on the field. We need to ensure that the students have everything they need to continue to shine in every respect. We have a dedicated band staff. Most of us have no idea of how much the staff gives to teach, train and guide these students. We need to support the students and the staff who give so much of themselves to ensure we have an excellent marching band. I have chosen to give back to VSU by supporting the band and I encourage others to do the same.

Stephanie Smith

Why do I support the band? Because it is the right thing to do. The members of the group deserve no less than what we had in the good old days when we were the proud Marching 110.... so I am calling on all band alumni, especially music majors, to dig deep and help these most worthy band members- they are great to see and hear. GO TROJANS!

H. Ray Davis

From the beginning of my collegiate experience the VSU Marching 110 has been synonymous with excitement, precision and music with a soul. As the university has transitioned into a nationally identifiable institution, so has the band. I feel that it is incumbent upon me to help continue this incredible legacy so that future generations may experience the pride and excitement of the new and improved VSU Trojan Explosion.

Calvin Rasberry
To my knowledge, the first marching band I ever remember seeing was Virginia State University's "Marching 110" about 35 years ago at a VSU Homecoming with my parents. That same day, I remember hearing an announcement over the PA that Central High School's "Marching Chargers" from Victoria, Virginia had placed 1st in the VSU Homecoming Parade. I will always remember my mother saying "that's Central's Band," and the enthusiasm she had in her voice hearing our hometown band had won.

I'm not sure what it was, but something on that October day really sparked my interest. Maybe it was the drums, maybe it was the uniforms, maybe it was the energy and excitement that VSU's band displayed. Regardless of whatever it was, nine years later, I found myself playing sousaphone in the Central High School band and would become drum major my junior and senior year.

It was those years in my high school band that I realized I had a sincere passion for music and more specifically marching bands. My director, Dennis Snead, was also the leader of Central's Band that day I first saw them as a small child at that VSU Homecoming game. As a graduate of Virginia State, Mr. Snead always encouraged students to attend his Alma Mater and exposed us to many great things that were happening at the institution. After high school, I would go on to attend Virginia State University and participate in that same band I saw as a small child thirteen years earlier. This was the same band that my parents, both as VSU Alumni, bragged about and my high school band director had marched in. Almost my entire family had attended VSU and we all loved “Orange & Blue.”

While at Virginia State, I was asked to be drum major by my director Mr. Harold Haughton, Sr. but turned the position down because I loved playing my instrument and my sousaphone section. Even though I wasn't drum major, I still decided to take on a leadership role in the band and stayed by Mr. Haughton's side every possible minute to hear old stories of how he had successfully built band programs over the years. I felt like I was hearing history that should be documented for future generations of music educators to know and if by chance it wasn't documented, then I wanted to carry on a piece of such a legacy and tradition. I can vividly remember sitting in the back of the band room in Lindsay-Montague Hall dreaming of what it would feel like to one day be one of the directors of the VSU Marching "Trojan Explosion".
When I was offered the job as band director in Warrenton, North Carolina, I had no idea of the struggles that I would go through or the many accomplishments that would come years later. One thing I knew for sure, I loved what I was doing and was prepared to give everything I had to succeed. I even got the opportunity to work with my old high school director again as he served as my assistant principal. Even though I was responsible for Warren County's band, I always kept close ties to Virginia State and helped with various parts of the program over the years, just as members of the VSU band program helped me. Because of this close relationship, my love for my Alma Mater never changed and I have always remained a proud Trojan. I also still had a desire to one day return to VSU and to carry on my director's legacy.

With all of that being said, I can only say how amazing it feels to stand in front of the 2013-2014 Virginia State University as the new Assistant Band Director. As the band takes the field this Saturday at MetLife Stadium in New Jersey versus Benedict College, I am sure I will be overcome with the emotion of this 35 year journey. I am truly blessed to be working with Mr. James Holden, Jr. (Director of Bands) & Rev. Sylvester Bullock (Assistant Director) as they both served as Assistants while I was a student at VSU. I will forever be grateful to Mr. Holden for extending me this opportunity and allowing me to reach my dream and work with such a wonderful group of talented students. I only wish that my father was still alive to see all of this unfold, as I know he would be proud of me. He referred to VSU as "State" and waited for this day just as I had. So, as I step into this new journey, I say look out for great things to come this year in Petersburg, Virginia & Warrenton, North Carolina.
